The Dash for Doobie is a charity fundraiser for a scholarship that celebrates the life of former Reagan runner Nick Doub, who was killed in a single-car accident in January of 2011.

It is important to note that this is an open event, unsanctioned by the NCHSAA, as the National Federation does not recognize any events that come after the official state championship; for this reason, all runners are competing unattached, cannot wear their school uniforms, and cannot be transported to the meet by their coaches (although coaches can come separately and be spectators).
